Informational Sessions: Accelerating university ideas into start-up companies

Interested in working at the intersection of science and business?

The Chicago Biomedical Consortium (CBC) Entrepreneurial Fellows program provides educational and real-world work experience to teach early-career scientists (recent PhD grads and postdocs) how to advance translational scientific research through to commercial applications. Join us to learn more about this paid program and our upcoming application process and deadlines. See available session dates below and register today!
